Forest Festival Is to Be Held at Stamps Aug. 16, at 2 p. m.

Barbecue and Public Games to Feature Annual Event in LaFayette County Town

The State Forestry Commission announced Thursday that this year's Forestry Festival would be held at Stamps on August 19, beginning about 2 p. m. and continuing through the day. Everyone in LaFayette, Columbia, Nevada, Hempstead and Ouachita counties is invited to attend this fete. The feaure of this year's affair is to be a barbecue, in co-operation with the Stamps Rotary club.

Last year over 2,000 people had a world of fun participating in the games which make up the afternoon program, starting about 2 p. m. Standard events scheduled for the festival are:

Wood-chopping contest, sawing contest, nail driving, rolling pin throwing, cracker eating, terrapin race, three-legged race, shoe kicking contest, hog calling, cow calling, husband calling, liars contest, 100-yard dash for boys, men and girls, watermelon eating contest, barrel rolling, sack races, horseshoe pitching, potato races, ladies ball throwing.

Other parts of the forestry fete will include fiddlers, quartets, moving pictures and speaking.

The forestry festival is now an established event, and everyone is cordially invited to come and have an old-fashioned good time, and take part in the games. Prizes will be given in each contest.

Old-fashined fiddlers should bring their fiddles.

Buying Power in South to Be Aided F.D.R. Again Says

Roosevelt Speaks at Athens, Ga., Receiving Honorary Degree

IS IN STATE RACE

Executive Supports L. S. Camp, Against Senator Walter F. George

ATHENS, Ga.—(AP)—President Roosevelt reasserted Thursday his desire to raise purchasing power in the South.

Speaking at the University of Georgia stadium, the chief executive received the honorary doctor of laws degree from Chancellor S. V. Sanford of the University system of Georgia.

The chief executive was introduced by Governor E. D. Rivers, who with Lawrence S. Camp conferred with Roosevelt at Warm Springs Wednesday. Roosevelt, in a brief talk at the Warm Springs Foundation, at that time gave Camp a straight-out endorsement in the race for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Camp, federal district attorney, is among the opponents of Senator Walter F. George, who is seeking renomination.

Roosevelt did not mention Camp or George in his talk Thursday.

He gave a broad re-outline of the administration's asserted desire to lift purchasing power and thereby "create wealth" in the South.

He asked for "constant progressive action" in government.

Erion to Be in Charge of Games

Much Entertainment Is Promised for County Fair

Earl W. Erion, field supervisor for recreation projects in this district, has offered his services and those of his subordinates in handling the games and contests to be conducted during the Hempstead County Fair.

Mr. Erion has been in this work for several years and his supervision and assistance of this phase of the fair program insures its success. He is arranging a full two-hour program for each afternoon, which includes all kinds of games, contests, community singing and other forms of entertainment for the fair visitors.

If You Don't Like Your Town's Name —Write the Board

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Anybody who doesn't like the name of a rixer, creek or hill—or for that matter any geographical formation in his vcinity, might get the name changed if he wrote to the United States Board of Geographical names.

That's the board which held President Roosevelt was entitled to use the name Krum Elbow for his Hudson river estate.

The board's staff has been busy since 1890, whe ngovernment surveyors and mapmakers convinced Congress that toi many places and geographical formations in the United States had too many different names. Now, when the board speaks, a geographical name is final.

The research staff of the board leans heavily on local usage for names, but in case of dispute the argument is carried back through musty historical records until the evidence for a certain name is conclusive.

And don't think it's easy work. Last year alone the board had to settle disputes over the names of 125 geographical formations in Chesapeake bay alone.

No Speeches Allowed

SAUKEVILLE, Wis.—(AP)—Saukeville folk like their band concerts "straight," so the village board has put a ban on political talks at free concerts and movies in the park.

Changes His Mind About Submarines

"Sub" Has Many More Dials and Gauges Than Air Bomber

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON.—Until this day I had never been inside a submarine and a one-hour's visit compelled a complete rewriting of all previous impressions about what goes on in the war beneath the seas.

Impressive stories have been written about the dozens of dials and gauges a pilot of a big airbomber has to watch.

But in comparison with a submarine, the dashboard of a modern bomber looks as simple as the backside of an alarm clock. For every dial on a plane there are 10 in a submarine. Every two paces a person must sidestep an outeropping motor or a jutting dial board.

The Seael (submarines are named for sea creatures), a spanking new 1,300-ton submarine, put it at Washington after sainling up the Potomac and a few newsmen were permitted to go into her belly. A submarine looks like nothing so much as a 300-foot section of a huge metropolitan water main pinched together neatly at the ends.

On the top-side is platform deck, above which stricks a tapered-off deck cabin and a single gun. Several hatchways, each the size of a manhole, let a person down in. You do better in a submarine if you are middle height and thin, of which this correspondent is one but not the other. Inside, it is the beautifully polished intricacy of a fine watch.

Have A Cigar

The $4,000,000 Seal has some of the Navy's latest devices for making a submarine the terror of the seas. In a spot or two as our party squirmed through the boat we were told not to look too closely or ask questions but at the end of the journey I emerged with only one or two ideaes that conceivably might be considered naval secrets.

This lady had four torpedo tubes forward and four aft, and ton-weight torpedoes were tucked about here and there like cigars in the pockets of an electioneering congressman. It can spit out torpedoes from the surface or when down a hundred feet or more. Under their own power, torpedoes automatically seek the level at which they are set to race through the water, several miles if necessary, to open up an enemy cruiser.

Hitting the right spot, one torpedo can lay open a hole in the flank of a battleship as big as a tunnel.

On the walls, the floor and even the ceiling are valves, dials, switches, buttons, speaking tubes, signal lights, steering wheels, motors, gauges, speedometers and devices to measure constantly the distance to the surface and to the bottom.

Mr. Grover's Observation

In battle, a submarine travels "blind" much of the time. It sticks its periscope above the surface for an occasional fleeting glance at its target and then jerks it back out of sight. In those instants of vision the sub officer must learn the distance, spede and course of the enemy ship, so he can send a torpedo to meet it.

On the surface the boat travels with Diesel engines which also charge tremendous storage bateries. These batteries furnish power for underwater travel when the Diesels can't be used.

Before the boat dives, every hull opening must be closed and the Diesels shut off. If left running with all air sources cut off, the Diesels, gasping for breath with their 4,000 horsepower lungs, would create an instant vaccum within the submarine.

"It might kill the crew instantly," saiad an officer. With all normal air pressure gone the men probably would explode like popcorn.

You should see the Seal's kitchen. In space the size of a double telephone booth the cook prepares meals for 50 men and five officers. He can lock his pots and pans in place on the electric stove. Like other cooks, he looked pained at having visitors.

The whole submarine is a beautiful mechanism, as deadly as a witch's blessing. I, personally, would not feel bad if it spent its whole working life lolling about in the Potomac, needing never to take a crack at an enemy vessel.

They Laugh at Superstition But They Really Believe in It

Gathers Some Amusing Stories Into New Newspaper Series

". . . shoot the rifle three times and hold out the plate before you."

Of course YOU are not superstitious (oh no!)—but most of the world is . . . Ben Lucian Burman, famed novelist who wrote "Mississippi" "Steamboat 'Round the Bend" and "Blow for a Landing," is an authority on the superstitious beliefs of people in many lands. The most amusing of these he has gathered together in a laugh-provoking series of four articles. The first article follows.

Everybody is superstitious. Talk to your friend who prides himself on his education and his wordly sophistication about superstition and he'll answer "Rubbish."

But watch his face light with joy as he spies a four leaf clover growing on the course where he's playing golf, or risks his life to run out between charging automobiles on the highway to pick up a horseshoe.

Or he will spend weeks using all his influence with everybody from the governor of the state down for the privilege of having two sevens on his automobile license plate.

Negro's Story

Talk to a negro roustabout like my friend old Uncle Jesse on the steamboat Tennessee Belle out of New Orleans, and though he'll deny you at first, he'll always wind up by saying:

"I don't believe none of them things. But this here I knows to be a fact.

Deputy on Trial in Slaying of Doctor

Girl's Sweetheart in Prison—Now Her Father Faces Trial

SOUTH PARIS, Me.—(AP)—Francis M. Carroll's wife and friends supported Wednesday the ousted deputy sheriff's story of his whereabouts the night Dr. James G. Littlefield was brutally beaten and strangled.

Carroll, 43, denied what Paul N. Dwyer, 19, who confessed the slaying and went to prison for life, now claims to be "the true" version—that Carroll slew not only the 67-year-old physician but his wife, Lydia, 63, a killing Dwyer also had admitted.

Defense Lawyer Clyde R. Chapman removed one of the anticipated highlights of the trial when he announced he had decided against calling to the stand Barbara, 18, daughter of Carroll and former sweetheart of Dwyer.

On the night of October 13, when "Doctor Jim" was bludgeoned and strangled in Dwyer's home, Carroll said, he first attended an American Legion supper, leaving to serve a summons. He returned to Legion hall and on his way home aided in an arrest.

Morris Prince, 43, a friend of Carroll, testified the defendant left the Legion hall between 7:30 and 8 p. m., and that he saw Carroll again outside the hall between 9 and 9:30 p. m. Theyhad arranged to play cards, he added, but Carroll's late arrival at the Prince home precluded that. Prince said Carroll remained at his home until "after midnight."

Mrs. Carroll testified she did not see her husband leave the Legion supper but found him waiting for her when it was over. Her testimony as to what happened after that coincided with Prince's.

She corroborated her husband's story of his whereabouts the night Dwyer said Carroll strangled Mrs. Littlefield.

Carroll said that not until his arrest last May the originally was charged with morals offense involving Barbara) did he know of letters, from Barbara to Paul, that have figured largely in the state's case. Ingalls contended that in one of those missives the girl told of seduction by her father. When Paul gave Dr. Litlefield that information, Ingalls said, Carroll had a motive.

Pilkinton Wins by Wide Margin

Complete Unofficial Returns Give Hope Man 3,261 Margin

Complete unofficial returns from Hempstead, Pike and Montgomery counties Thursday gave James H. Pilkinton of Hope a margin of 3,261 votes over W. F. Reagon in the race for state senator from the ninth district.

Here are the complete unofficial returns:

	Pilkinton	Reagan
Hempstead	3,628	412
Pike	576	1,314
Montgomery	1,523	740
Total	5,727	2,466

The average Southern farm is 106 acres. The average in the rest of the U. S. is 205 acres.

Fred Cook Family in Auto Accident

Escape Serious Injury in Car Wreck Near Dyersburg, Tenn.

The Fred Cook family of Hope escaped possible serious injury Tuesday afternoon when their automobile turned over near Dyesburg, Tenn., while en route home from a visit to Murfreesboro, Tenn.

In the car was Mrs. Cook, her four children and a sister who lives at Dyersburg.

Mr. Cook, who remained in Hope, said that his family was not injured except for minor bruises and scratches. Mrs. Cook's sister sustained an injured shoulder.

Reports said the automobile turned over when a tire was punctured, ripping off the fenders of the car and damaging the top.

Dances During Dad's Murder Trial

Dancing gaily just before she took the witness stand in her father's murder trial was Barbara Carroll, pictured above at a party in Harrison, Me. Defense attorneys said Barbara would defend her father against accusations of her former boy friend, Paul Dwyer, that Carroll killed Dr. and Mrs. James G. Littlefield. Barbara burst into tears and left when news men found her at this party.

Order Armistice for Russia, Japan in Border Quarrel

"Cease Firing Order" Goes Out at Noon Thursday on Frontier

HANKOW IS RAIDED

Believe 500 Killed on U. S. School Campus in Capital Suburb

TOKYO, Japan.—(AP)—The Japanese War office announced Thursday night that complete quiet prevailed throughout the Siberian-Manchoukuoan border region, as a Russian-Japanese armistice went into effect.

The "cease firing order" went out at noon in the disputed border zone, where Soviet and Japanese troops had been fighting since July 29, in accordance with the terms of an armistice agreement reached in Moscow.

Japs Bomb U. S. School

MANKOW, China.—(AP)—Japanese air raiders killed an undetermined number of Chinese Thursday on the campuses of an American church mission's Doone University and St. Hilda's girls' school at Wuchang.

Twenty-seven planes heavily bombed Hanyang and Wuchang, across the Yangtze river from Hankow, provisional capital, in an afternoon raid.

Preliminary estimates placed total casualties in the two cities at more than 500, but it was feared the toll would be much higher as rescue squads dug desperately in the wreckage of buildings.

Christian Church to Hold Watermelon Feast

A loyalty watermelon banqhet for men and women of First Christian church will be held at 7:45 p. m. Friday on the lawn of the church.

The watermelons are being donated by the Every Man's Bible class of the church. A 100 per cent membership is requested for the banquet.

A program also has been arranged in conjunction with the watermelon feast.

Cloudbursts Strike in Northeast, Lake Regions

By the Associated Press

Early morning rainstorms which reached near-cloudburst proportions in New York state poured over many sections of the Northeast and Middle Atlantic regions Thursday, endangering shipping on Lake Erie and causing considerable damage to property and crops.

Twenty-five persons in six boats who had been missing in storm-lashed Lake Erie were rescued or made their way to safety.

Idaho Nominates Anti-New Dealer

Conservative Clark Defeats Senator Pope, Who Had F. D. Support

BOISE, Ida.—(AP)—Conservative Congressman D. Worth Clark, who on occasion has opposed President Roosevelt's policies, widened his lead Wednesday night over James P. Pope. With 664 of Idaho's 802 precincts reported, the vote was:

Clark	40,729
Pope	37,189

Pope shortly before noon sent the congressman a message of congratulations and pledged "continued support to principles for which I stand."

Clark's opponent will be Donald A. Callahan, Wallace awyer, who defeated two rivas for the Republican nomination.

While Clark gaintd steadily in late returns, his uncle, Gov. Barzilla W. Clark, slowly fell behind in the race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Votes from 647 precincts gave:

Former Gov. Ren Ross	25,392
Clark	24,117
Lieut. Gov. C. C. Gossett	18,306
W. P. Whitaker of Pocatello	10,669

Senator Pope' defeat bore especial significance because only last month Democratic Chairman James A. Farley had told a Boise audience it was "highly importantant" that Idaho elect a "Democratic senator who will support the president in any program he undertakes," after having asserted "there is no senator in Washington who has been more layal or sincere in support of the administration than has Senator Pope."

Clark, endorsed by supporters of the Townsend old-age pension plan, has opposed the administration's reorganization and court revision bills and frequently has approved the isolationist policies of Idaho's veteran Republican senator, William E. Borah.

MIND Your MANNERS

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. Should a young woman say "Good night" to her employer when she leaves the office?

2. Is it good taste for a girl to have lunch with a single man who works in the same office?

3. If a girl dates a man who works in the same office, should she treat him in a business-like way during office hours?

4. Should one say "Good morning" to the people he passes on his way to his desk?

5. Is it better to say, "Yes, Mr. Smith" than "Yes, sir" when answering your employer?

What would you do if—

There is someme in your office whom you dislike intensely?

(a) Avoid him, even when he is the logical person to go to for a certain thing?

(b) Treat him courteously whenever you have business with him?

(c) Tell your employer that you will not have anything to do with the person?

Answers

1. If she passes by his desk.
2. Yes.
3. Yes.
4. Yes.
5. "Yes, Mr. Smith" is better.

Caraway and Bailey Majorities Decisive on Late Returns

FULLER IS BEATEN

Ellis Apparently Nominated for Third District Congressman

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—A 1:15 p. m. tabulation by the Associated Press Thursday of unofficial returns from Tuesday's Democratic primary in the supreme court contest showed:

Associate justice (Donham's place): 1,928 out of 2,002 precincts—

Donham	125,150
Holt	127,281

Holt's lead of 2,131 was on the basis of returns which included Poinsett county complete.

A Tight Race

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—A nip-and-tuck race between Judge W. R. Donham of Little Rock and J. Seaborn Holt of Fort Smith for the supreme court post left vacant by the death of Associate Justice Turner Butler held the interest of the state Thursday as belated unofficial returns trickled in from Tuesday's Democratic primary.

The vote, still incomplete, gave:

Donham	122,507
Holt	124,162

Other returns Thursday showed as follows:

For United States Senate: 1,937 precincts—

Caraway	140,366
McClellan	132,462
Venable	3,273

For governor: 1,959 precincts—

Gathings	24,519

Congress—Third district (277 out of 278 precincts)—

Ellis	13,962
Fuller	13,690

Representative David D. Terry, Fifth district, and Representative Ben Cravens, Fourth district, were renominated.

Wilbur D. Mills won nomination in the Second district, and State Senator W. F. Norrell nomination in the Sixth district (the seat vacated by John L. McClellan).

Congress Races

LITTLE ROCK—Two of the races for Arkansas seven seats in the national House of Representatives remained undecided Wednesday night and it seemed certain that they will not be decided until the official canvass is made Friday.

In the First district, the veteran Representative William J. Driver of Osceola was trailing State Senator E. C. Gathings of West Memphis by 58 votes on the basis of unofficial returns from 271 of the 274 precincts in the district. Mr. Driver said that a personal check of every precinct in the district had convinced him that he had won.

The vote:

Gathings	24,448
Driver	24,390

In the Third district also, the official count will be necessary to decide the winner. Unofficial returns from 271 of the 278 precincts showed State Senator Clyde Ellis leading Representative Claude Fuller of Eureka Springs by 82 votes.

Totals were:

Ellis	13,272
Fuller	13,190

Results in the other districts were decided. In the Second Wilbur Mills of Kensett, Whiet county judge, defeated Roy Richardson of Walnut Ridge, former prosecuting attorney, by 5,374 with all 347 precincts reported.

The vote:

Mills	24,415
Richardson	18,141

Congressman Ben Cravens of Fort Smith was renominated in the Fourth district. He defeated D. L. Ford of Fort Smith, former state revenue com-

Let Crystal-Gazers Keep Their Fingers Crossed

ONE of the big features of the coming World's Fair in New York is to be an exhibit called "The World of Tomorrow." Here the eager citizen will be able to lift the veil of the future and have a gander at his land as it may look when all the troubles and imperfections of the present day have been straighted out.

Probably it will be very popular. In a land which supports uncounted fortunetellers, astrologers and other seers, a fulldress glimpse into tomorrow's world ought to do a land-office business.

Yet this is a chancy time for the human race to be indulging in prophecies. For while it is quite true that tomorrow's world ought to be a fine and dazzling place, what with all the inventions, plans and gadgets which are going to be available, it looks more and more like an open question whether the race is going to get down to tomorrow in any kind of shap to enjoy these marvels.

FROM Europe comes news, for instance, of a new kind of demolition bomb, which is being dropped on divers Spanish towns with great success. It has a long spike at its nose; when it hits the ground it hits spike-first, and explodes before it gets below the surface of the earth. As a result, instead of making a big hole in the ground it blows down every house, tree, fence and human being within a wide radius, and so is far more destructive than the old type of bomb.

Now when you stop to think that every great nation on earth will presently be equipping itself with such bombs in carload lots, that planes to carry them farther and faster than ever before are coming off the production lines in dizzying numbers, and that the will to use the things is steadily mounting, you can see that this race of ours might very well keep its fingers crossed when it does any looking to the future.

THE plain fact of the matter is that our path to the future is darkly clouded by our own folly. We can make a very glittering and fancy world for ourselves in a comparatively short time, if we can just manage to keep from annihilating ourselves while we are doing it; but we seem to be developing our destructive instincts faster than our constructive instincts, and if we once start turning those spike-nosed bombs loose in real earnest this "world of tomorrow" is not going to be anything anyone would pay good money to have a look at.

There is not really any need to be too pessimistic—for the remedy, after all, lies in our own hands. But there is a great deal of need to look all of the facts in the face, and to admit that tomorrow's world is apt to be a sorry place unless we really get down to the job of intelligently planning for it.

Statesmanship and Bread

SOMETIMES the contortions that the world's official international conversationalists involve themselves in seem just a little silly.

Sometimes the delicate issues these gentlemen juggle so deftly in the halls of diplomacy just don't seem quite worth jugling.

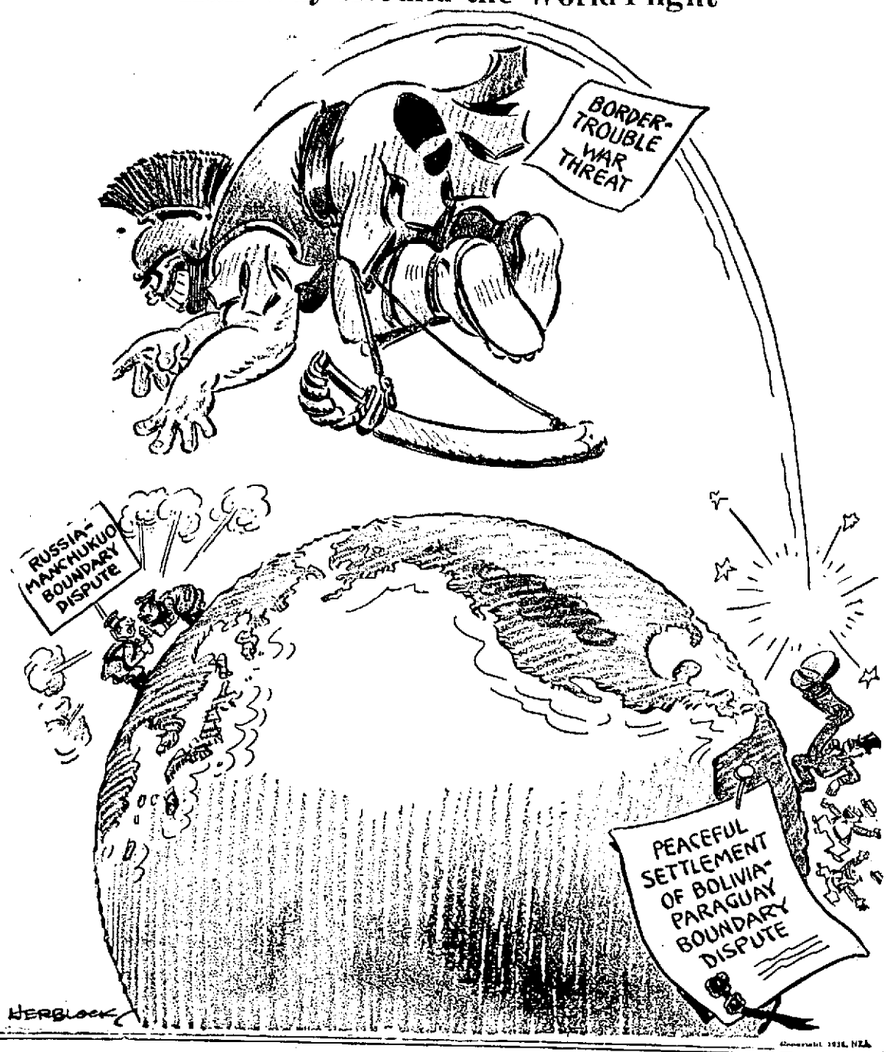

A man can't help wondering, on occasion, why all that talent doesn't ever—just as stunt—try itself on some basic and common problem like food, for instance.

There are millions of people scattered broadly over this civilized world who simply cannot get enough to eat and never have been able to. The problem of malnutrition has been the subject of a League of Nations committee's investigation, and that problem has just been described as the "outstanding challenge to constructive statesmanship and international co-operation."

There is no country whose malnutrition problems could not be greatly minimized by governmental co-operation, the committee report observes, and the cost of the program would be "insignificantly small" in proportion to the international benefits which would accrue.

But o fcourse there are always more important matters to be attended to first. Battleships and spheres of influence to be measured properly.

RAISING A FAMILY

By Olive Roberts Barton

Sharp Tongue Buts Bonds of Friendship

A little girl went visiting. Later she said to her mother, "I didn't have a very good time. The girls talked at me so. I thought they were mean to each other too, for somebody was always trying to get back at somebody else."

Her mother stroked the smooth hair understandingly. "I guess I know what you mean, darling. Sometimes I go places where I feel absolutely helpless. When anybody says something to me that sounds unpleasant my mind isn't searching for a chance to give someone a cut. You're just like me, thank goodness."

"But I feel so stupid," said the child. "All the girls were so smart. When Helen said to Elizabeth that she didn't like artists—Elizabeth's father paints, you know—quick as a flash she answered, 'That's because artists pick pretty girls to paint.' I wouldn't have thought that."

"And I'm delighted," said mother. "Neither you nor I lie awake nights planning things to answer or mean things to say. It gets to be a habit after awhile. Do you know why I left the club last year? Well, it was because some of the ladies were always making somebody uncomfortable. I got tired trying to defend myself when I didn't know how.

"If I had stayed, pretty soon I would have been exulting in doing what Elizabeth did, and even watching for a chance to show how clever I was."

"Then I wasn't just being stupid and slow, was I? When Hester asked me what color my room was I said it was mixed, and she said she wondered how anybody could sleep in a mixed room. I didn't need to say, 'How little you've traveled,' did I? I thought that up on the way home."

"It would have been a good answer, dear, and she deserved it, but if you begin saying things like that, you get into the habit.

"Movies make girls talk so brightly and give them such amusing little gags to speak, that now all the nice girls like yourself feel you have to learn how to make wise cracks. But most people are plain and not so gifted."

"You don't want me to be smart?"

"No, not that way."

The Amount of Acid in the Stomach Varies With the Individual

The human being is normally slightly alkaline in his reactoni. The secretions of his stomach are rarely abnormally acid. When they are, it means that he is suffering with diabetes, Bright's disease, or poisoning of one kind or another, and that he is really in a serious condition.

The normal man's digestive secretions are seldom highly acid. However, there are instances in which these secretions of the stomach associated with digestion are more acid than usual.

The stomach secretes hydrochloric acid and pepsin for digesting proteins. When the amount of free hydrochloric acid in the stomach is higher than normal, the condition is called hyperchlorhydria.

Even in normal persons there are great differences in the amount of free hydrochloric acid that is poured out by the stomach. It is said that about 4 per cent of people do not have any hydrochloric acid in their gastric juice, and that as many as 10 per cent of people have less than the average.

Therefore, while an excess or a slightly diminished amount of hydrochloric acid in the gastric juice may be considered as of interest, it is not necessarily a symptom that something very serious is wrong and that something ought to be done about it.

Usually, excess acid in the stomach is associated with excessive work, excessive worry, imperfect choice of food, overindulgence in tobacco or alcohol, in spices or other unusual foods. It is also associated sometimes with the presence of ulcers of the stomach, or other serious conditions. Cocktails and various strong alcoholic liquors tend to stimulate the flow of gastric juice. In relationship to such stimulation there may be a first excessive acid in the stomach, and later lessened acid or a complete absence.

Sometimes there is a change in the acid content of the gastric juice in conditions like appendicitis or inflammations of the gall bladder. These are called reflex effects.

Before doing anything, however, about excess acid in the stomach, it is well to consult a doctor to find out the extent of the excess and whether or not anything ought to be done about it.

It is well established that people with such conditions may be improved by lessening the amount of table salt in their diets, since the hydrochloric acid is developed from material found

HAYWIRE HOUSE

BY EDWIN RUTT

COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday: On sudden inspiration Kinks invites two strangers to try the "Pennington-Parker Restatorium"—his aunt's house.

CHAPTER IV

SALLY PENNINGTON gaped at him. Fortunately she was too flabbergasted for speech just at that moment. The elderly woman eyed Kinks, who was feeling as Caesar must have felt on the opposite bank of the Rubicon.

"The Pennington-Parker Restatorium?" she repeated. "I never heard of it."

"No," said Kinks. "You couldn't have. It—it only opened today. You'll be the first—ah—patrons."

The old gentleman behind the wheel spoke for the first time.

"It wouldn't do any harm to have a look at the place, Mother," he said.

"Now, Papa," said the woman, in a hush-hush tone. Then she addressed Kinks again: "What are your rates?"

"Six dollars per day," flashed Sally.

The woman in the car took time out for thought.

"Very well," she said, at length. "Mr. Harkness and I will look at it. And I hope you have electricity. Mr. Harkness likes to putter with electricity."

"There is electricity," Sally told her.

"All right," said Mrs. Harkness. "How do we get there?"

"Just follow our car," said Kinks grandly.

"Now you've done it," said Sally, as she headed her ancient Ford back toward Mrs. Preston's place. "What on earth possessed you?"

"Feed 'em, sleep 'em and let 'em putter with the electricity. At six bucks a day per person. Why, in about 50 days we'll have earned the mortgage interest. Parker's bright idea saves old homestead. What do you think of that?"

"I think it's nuts," said Sally. "The mortgage is due in two weeks. And even if we did this mad thing, the money wouldn't be all clear profit."

"Something else will turn up," said Kinks confidently. "Just like the Harknesses did."

* * *

MRS. PRESTON'S house was as charming inside as out, save for the presence of a superfluity of mounted animal heads in the living room. While Sally, dithering slightly, showed the bedrooms to the Harknesses, Kinks inspected the collection of mounted specimens, so strangely at odds with the antique furniture and tasteful curtains.

Mrs. Clipstack

There was an elk's head, complete with antlers, over the fireplace. On the opposite wall the glassy eyes of a mountain lion glared at the elk. The head of a wolf lurked in a corner. On the floor lay a skin which either ended or began in the head of a black bear. And gazing through to the dining room Kinks perceived a speckled trout condemned to gape for Eternity upon a varnished board.

"My Lord," he murmured. "Who let these in?"

"Well," she said, "we're in the soup up to our necks. The Harknesses are crazy about the place."

"Swell," said Kinks. "Look Sal—er—Miss Pennington, do you mind if I say that I'm getting quite a kick out of being in business with you?"

"Very nice of you, I'm sure, Kin—er—Mr. Parker," said Sally.

"Let's take a hurdle," suggested Kinks, "and make it Sally and Kinks."

"All right." But I still think you're insane, Kinks. I don't know the first thing about running a hotel or a sanitorium or whatever this place is turning out to be."

"Confidentially," said Kinks, "I don't either. But I'll try anything once."

"And what Mrs. Clipstack is going to say, I can't think. She'll probably throw a fit. She does once in a while."

"Lead me to her," said Kinks. "I'll take Mrs. C. like Grant took Richmond."

Mrs. Clipstack was white-haired, red-cheeked and built on the same general plan as the Pennsylvania station. She radiated a kind of comfortable, flat-footed solidity. But she was deaf as the well-known post.

"This is Mr. Parker, Mrs. Clipstack," said Sally, raising her voice.

Mrs. Clipstack put her hands on her hips and her eyes gave Kinks a thorough going over. Then she removed a hand from a hip and cupped it behind her ear.

"Eh?" she said.

"I said," shouted Sally, "that this is MR. PARKER."

"What say?" said Mrs. Clipstack.

"PARKER," shrilled Sally.

"Tough going just here, isn't it?" murmured Kinks.

"Parker, hey?" Intelligence swept over the Clipstackian visage. "Then—then he's Mrs. Preston's nephew?"

Sally nodded.

"Well, young man," said Mrs. Clipstack severely, "I hope you ain't no improvident scapegrace like your father was."

* * *

KINKS looked blank for a second. "My father? Oh, I get it. She's heard that from my aunt. Tell her I'm not a scapegrace, will you, Sally?"

"Tell her yourself," said Sally. "My throat won't work any more."

Kinks told her, at the top of his lungs. He also beamed upon her. But Mrs. Clipstack looked skeptical.

"Who broke my winder?" she demanded, at last.

Sally pointed to Kinks.

"There!" said Mrs. Clipstack, triumphantly. "I suspicioned it all along. He is a scapegrace."

"You'll have to square yourself with her for that window," Sally laughed, when they were back in the living room. "You can go into Winstock tomorrow, find a glazier and pay for the work, too. But right now, I've got a job for you. Out you go and bring in the Harknesses' luggage."

"Who, me?" said Kinks.

"Yes, you. What do you think you're going to do, just pose around here?"

"Okay, Mrs. Legree," said Kinks and departed.

When he returned laden with luggage Sally was at the phone in the hall. She hung up as he was crossing the living room.

"Was that somebody else inquiring our rates?" Kinks said jokingly.

"Don't be silly," said Sally. "That was Wilton Ames."

"Wilton Ames? Who the devil is Wilton Ames?"

"Oh, nobody very much," said Sally negligently. "Just the man I'm probably going to marry."

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Kenneth Roberts Gives You Maine—(He Really Wouldn't Part With It)

Kenneth Roberts discusses his favorite state with a discursive enthusiasm in his newest book, "Trending Into Maine" (Little, Brown: $3), and the result is an entertaining and persuasive bit of reading.

Mr. Roberts is out, simply, to tell why he likes the state of Maine. He apologizes, first, for not knowing more about it. He can think of at least a hundred spots in Maine where he would like to settle down and live out the rest of his days, he says; if he really knew the state, he adds, he could undoubtedly think of fully 10,000.

If you have read his novels you know the breezy, engaging flavor of his writing. He applies it to good effect here, recites stray bits of the state's history, tells of the historical figures which gave him the bases for the people of "Arundel," "Rabble in Arms," "Captain Caution," and so on, and indignantly defends state-of-Mainers against the charge that they are a dour, repressed, humorless, and tight-fisted people.

He tells how fish chowder is made in Maine, how beans are baked, how lobster fishermen earn their living, how to cook ducks, how Maine's sons fought in the Civil War, and why hunting partridges in the Maine woods is the best of all sports. He tells about Indian massacres and about old-time Maine shipbuilders, about the attack on Louisburg and about hot buttered rum—and, all in all, writes a book which is pretty certain to interest you even if you never saw Maine and never intend to.

This intense regional pride is not a bad thing. In this one case it has led to the production of a good book. It wouldn't be bad if native sons of other localities would go out and do likewise.

In Hollywood

It Was Midnight on the Movie Lot, Nothing Natural Was in Sight

(Bill Porter, of NEA Service's Hollywood staff, is writing the Hollywood column while Paul Harrison is on vacation)

By BILL PORTER

HOLLYWOOD. Midnight on Universal's back lot: The set for "Youth Takes a Fling" is a summer resort of false-fronted cottages, lily ponds with artificial lilies sticking up out of the water on wires, and shrubbery of live oak with more fake flowers tied on.

A romantic moonlight glow floods the scene. But the glow is not the glow of the full moon which hangs low over the Hollywood hills. It is made by a bank of sun are lamps. The real moon is blacked out by a huge back drop.

Andrea Leeds, in a beautiful white wedding gown, stands on a Japanese bridge rehearsing warm love to Joel McCrea, while under the bridge bubbles a brook of clear, cool water, direct from a fire hose which is being controlled by a stagehand. Swans sail with dignity on a pond in the background.

As Director Archie Mayo is about to yell "action," Rudy Mate, the cameraman, interrupts and calls for a make-up man. The make-up man rushes over and, following Mate's instructions, applies some make-up to the beaks of the swans. The lighting had been such that the swan's beaks didn't show in the camera.

After the scene was shot, Mayo called lunch, and truckloads of food from the studio commissary were spread on rough tables. Stars and extras alike fell to with a will. Later that same night, Andrea Leeds in the same wedding gown, standing on the same bridge, was drenched by torrential rains from an overhead sprinkler system.

Wellman's Medals Crash the Movies

On the "Men With Wings" set Fred MacMurray, cast as a French Army Air Corps pilot, was proudly displaying a chestload of medals. He explained that the honors were borrowed, but that the medals were genuine.

They belonged to Director "Wild Bill" Wellman who, as a member of Spad 87, LaFayette Flying Corps, received official credit for shooting down two German planes. Unofficially he brought down three more planes.

Toward the close of the war Wellman was brought down by "archie," or aricraft artillery fire. MacMurray's story of Wellman's accomplishments was interrupted by that director himself, who shouted, "Fred, quit telling lies about those medals and come on let's get to work."

Toupee Or Not Toupee, That Is the Question

Cecil B. DeMille's bald spot has become almost as famous as the boots and breeches he wears while directing, so it was somewhat of a shock to the Westmore brothers, creators of stylish hairpieces, when they received an order for a dome doily for DeMille himself. It didn't seem possible that DeMille would stoop to the indignity of a toupee.

Checking, they found that DeMille had indeed ordered a hairpiece, but that it was for Akim Tamiroff, the actor, to wear in "Union Pacific." The clerk who made out the order had taken a short cut. Instead of making the order read, "For DeMille Productions, Inc.," she had simply written, "This is for DeMille."

He Always Dies With His Boots On

Joe Downing, noted stage and screen actor, figures he has "died" more than any actor in the country.

He was "shot" in his first picture, "Dr. Socrates." Every night, save Sunday, for 86 weeks, he was rubbed out on the stage in "Dead End," and after returning to Hollywood he was bumped off in "Slight Case of Murder," "Borrowing Trouble," "Wide Open Faces," "I Am the Law," and "Racket Busters."

Total, 465 violent deaths. In every instance he was fully dressed and armed with a pistol.

On the opposite side of the law is Fred Kelsey, veteran character actor. In the past 27 years Kelsey has played the role of a policeman 550 times. It is said he has become so typed in the role that he can't pass a fruit stand without taking an apple.

Curfew Song

I am at home
In any little town
With curfew ringing
The summer night down.

And swooping shadows
That many call bats,
And alleys peopled
With plush-treading cats.

And the dipper stars
Perilously near
A green oak standing
Solemn and austere.

Any town ringing
Its curfew at nine
Is momentarily

sime nice fresh milk, and then he swallowed it. And he moved that sponge up and down in his stomach a minute, 'cause he knowed snakes is crazy about milk.

Mystery of Life

A superstition is an attempt to explain the mysteries of human life, those forces and occurrences about us which are unexplainable. And only when there are no more mysteries will superstitions cease.

I talked to a witch once, way up in the Cumberland mountains, 50 miles from a railroad. She was an ugly, disagreeable little woman with one good eye and a black potch over the other.

When I saw her she was walking with a bad limp, and one of the neighbors told me the reason. She had been bewitching everybody's cows so that all their milk was curdled, and one white haired old man, the sage of the countryside, decided to stop it once for all. Next time he milked his cows, he took a red hot iron, and plunged it suddenly into the pail brim full of the white liquid. There was a loud hissing and steaming, and then a cry came in the distance, as of someone in agony.

The next day the witch couldn't get up from her bed. A little girl who helped with her cooking said her whole side was burned in a manner terrible to see.

A Witch

It's easy to become a witch, if you care to take the trouble—and the risks. Take a plate and a gun, and climb a high hill just before dawn. As the rim of the rising sun first touches the horizon, shoot the gun three times and hold out the plate before you. Three drops of blood will fall into the plate. Drink the blood, curse the Lord, and praise the Devil. And you're a witch.

On the other hand, you may be a person whose desire it not to become a sorceress, but to get rid of those who are annoying you. You may be bothered by a witch without knowing it. If you've been waking up in the night with bad dreams and a feeling of heavy pressure on your chest or stomach, or if you get up in the morning exhaused, that's not indigestion or nerves as you think, but it's a witch that's been using you as a horse and riding you everywhere. And if you look hard enough in the bedclothes, you may find some of the burrs that you've pickid up in your mad charging through the woods.

The Remedy

"You can stop a witch mighty easy," says Uncle Jesse. "All you got to do is to git you a flour sifter or a piece of mosquito bar, and put it over your face jest before you goes to bed. Witch has to go through every single one of them meshes before she can get to you, and ain't a witch can do it dowheres. 'Cause it gets dawn before she's done, and she's got to fly away.

"If you twist up little corners in the mosquito bar, sometimes you can catch 'em, 'cause whenthey get mighty tired they falls inside. They looks kind of like what they calls gelatin.

"If you ain't got a mosquito bar, throw down mustard seed. 'Cause a witch is out of her skin, and course her feet's mighty tender, not having no skin on the soles thataway. Them mustard seeds 'd hurt her something terrible if she walked on 'em so she's got to pick up everyone before she can get to work tormenting you. And by the time she's done, roosters a-crowing."

American Shouts Down Jap General

Japanese Had Accused Doctor of Being a Spy

SHANGHAI—(AP)—Japanese soldiers on duty in the Yangtze River delta area know him as the "hell-raising American doctor who won't quit traipsing around our territory."

He earned that sobriquet by banging his fist on a table and shouting down a Japanese officer who had called him a spy.

The Chinese peasants of the same area call him the "big white boss of the huge brich house if many beds at Huchow." Huchow is 120 miles west of Shanghai and the house of many beds is the Huchow General hospital, an Amtrican-owned institution.

He is Dr. Frederick Manget of Newnan, Georgia. For the last 25 years he has been attached to the Southern Methodist Episcopal Mission in China, where he has practiced medicine on a charity basis among the Chinese.

Had to Flee

When the war came Dr. Manget performed operations upon wounded Chinese soldiers while aerial bombs fell just outside the mission compound. A few days before the Japanese occupation of the city on November 22, 1937, he evacuated the institution and took patients and staff to Hangchow, some 40 miles away.

In February the doctor returned to Huchow and found the hospital and mission in Japanese hands. Before the doctor had an poportunity to start negotiations for the return of the institution to the mission, he was arrested and escorted to Shanghai by a Japanese military guard.

The Japanese military authorities at Huchow believed he might be a spy and were taking no chances. Turning him over the boundaries of the International Settlement, they told him o stay there.

But Came Back

But the doctor didn't stay. By the end of March, he was back again. On this occasion, he found the hospital and mission buildings in a sorry condition.

The compound was being used as a fortress against Chinese gutrilla attacks. Holes had been made in the brick walls and were being used as machine-gun emplacements. The mission church, he relates, had been stripped of pews, altar and other furnishings and was being used as a crematory for dead Japanese soldiers.

The doctor demanded to see the Japanese colonel in command, but was denied. The commandant of the Japanese military police decided the doctor might be a spy for the Chinese.

"This made me mad," the doctor told an Asscoiated Press reporter. "I got up out of my chair and, shouting my indignation in the Chinese language, banged my fist on a table. The officer banged his fist and shouted, then stopped. Finally, we laughed and shook hands. But they wiuldn't give me back my hospital."

of Helpful Household Hints and Recipes

Conducted by ELEANOR HOWE

Have you ever thought of applying the principle of the Ark to your own kitchen and pantry — that is, have the kitchen utensils and gadgets go in two by two? It's a real temper-saving idea and not an extravagance, either, since most of the articles needed in duplicate cost only a few cents each. Two measuring cups, for wet and dry ingredients; two egg beaters, one just big enough to beat a single egg in a cup; two funnels, with large and small openings, and two sets of measuring spoons give you an idea of the convenience of this plan.

A new and piquant beverage for spring festivities is Golden Glory Punch. To serve 10, make 4 cups of orange pekoe tea. To this add ½ cup orange marmalade and ½ cup chopped maraschino cherries and about ¼ cup of their juice. Chill.

Just before serving, add 1 quart gingerale, pour over crushed ice and serve at once. Pure, taste-free ice, as you know, may be obtained from the ice service man or a piece may be chipped off the block in your modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator and then crushed.

Gaping plackets can be avoided by making them closed rather than opened. Cut a strip of material about 1½ inches wide and as long as the placket opening is to be. Stitch one side to the front edge, the other to the back edge of the seam opening. Stitch across the top and bottom ends of the placket and sew on snap fasteners as usual.

Now that the strawberry season is really here, you'll want to try STRAWBERRY BANANA REFRIGERATOR CAKE: Dissolve 1 package strawberry flavored gelatin in 1 cup boiling water, then add 1½ cups crushed ice. (This speeds up the jelling process and does not affect the flavor, if pure taste-free ice is used.) Chill until partially set, then whip until fluffy. Fold in 1 cup whipping cream (whipped), 6 marshmallows (cut in quarters), 1 cup strawberries (sliced), 1 banana (sliced), and a pinch of salt. Place in wax paper-lined loaf pan in alternate layers with ¼ lb. vanilla wafers. Chill in modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator, until firm, or over-night if desired. The texture and flavor will be perfectly protected by the properly moist, clean-washed air. Serves 6 to 8.

Instead of using a grater when onion juice is needed, cut the onion in thin slices and put it through the ricer. This is a much more "painless extraction."

Jams, jollies and preserves make excellent gifts and always sell well at bazaars and food sales. Wax paper picnic cups, the shaped and not the plaited kind, make excellent holders for the give-away jelly. Just let the jelly cool slightly before pouring it in. Cover with colored cellophane and tie with pretty wrapping ribbons.

* * *

"Prepared" dust cloths can be easily made at home. Simply pour 1 tablespoon of furniture polish into a glass fruit jar and shake the jar so that all the inside is coated. Then shake out a square yard of clean cheesecloth and put it in the jar. Let stand for 24 hours before using. When soiled, wash in soap and water, dry, and again place in the "treatment" jar.

Proper Cutting

From 15 to 25 per cent in feeding value may be added to legume hay crop if Hempstead county farmers will pay particular attention to proper cutting, curing and storing.

The stage at which legumes are cut for hay influences the composition, palatability, digestibility, and ease of curing the hay. Cutting the crop too early gives a hay of high uality, but reduces the yield too greatly to be profitable. On the other hand, late cutting causes the hay to be high in indigestible fibers, lower in proteins and carbohydrates, and consequently, lower in paletability and digestibility.

Hay should be cut when the crop contains the most protein per acre, when the crop also usually produces its maximum yield. Saybeans and cowpeas reach this stage when the pods are well formed and about half filled, according to Charles F. Simmons, Extension Agronomist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, the lower leaves should be just turning yellow.

Hay should be cut after the dew is gone, left in the swath for half a day or until completely wilted, and then when it is completely free of moisture, from dew or rain, raked into small windrows for further curing. If the hay is stored in the barn or baled directly from the widrow, some spoilagt will result, because of excessive moisture. Therefore, hay should be stacked until completely cured, Mr. Simmons said.

Grazing in Woods

Woodlands subject to heavy grazing are usually incapable of supplying the landowner with continuous cuttings of timber even though the trees removed are used only for farm needs such as fence posts, rough lumber and fuelwood.

The most damaging effect of heavy grazing to woodlands is that it destryos the young trees that "heed in" under the large, parent trees. The young trees are eaten off, trampled, and injured, leaving the ground almost completely bare, because the young trees have been destroyed.

Plenty of small trees are necessary in all woodlands ot provide the future crops of timber, according to M. H. Bruner, Extension Forester, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. Young trees are needed to replace the large, mature trees that are cut out if a constant supply of timber for the future needs is to be manitained.

But with heavy grazing, Mr. Bruner said, natural replacement of trees is prevented, and the stand becomes more open and scattered as the mature trees are cut.

Didn't Get Promotion So He Constructed His Own Railroad

MANDEVILLE, La.—(AP)—A veteran employe of the Gulf, Mobile and Northern railroad, despairing of ever becoming a railroad magnate, decided to build his own line.

It ook Sidney J. Thibodauq two years to finish what he calls the shortest standard gauge railroad in the world. It is only 500 feet long but it is complete with 60-pound rails and standard ties, switches, lamps, semaphores and telegraphic service.

Thibodeaux, station agent here for the G. M. and N. with 48 years' railroad experience, is 65 years old. He built his own railroad, called the Mandeville Northern, as a hobby for $1,200.

Rolling stock of the Mandeville Northern consists of a handcar powered by a gasoline engine and a small flatcar. Schedules on yeek-days are accommodated to traffic, Thibodeaux's half dozen grandchildren and their little friends. A regular schedule is followed on Saturdays and Sundays.

The process of surfcing iron or steel with zinc is named in honor of Luigi Galvini, 18th century Italian professor.

• STORIES IN STAMPS

Followed His Father To the White House

HISTORY played providentially with the distinguished Adams family of Massachusetts. John Adams was chosen second President of the United States to climax a brilliant career. His son, John Quincy Adams, became sixth President, rounding out an equally great career.

Rising through a long diplomatic service to become secretary of state, John Quincy Adams in 1824 looked forward to the presidency as the next step, even as Madison and Monroe had moved up. But there was a revolt against the old nominating system. The result was a battle between four candidates.

Jackson received 99 electoral votes; Adams, 84; Crawford, 41, and Clay 37. So the contest was thrown into the House, and there the Clay interests joined those of Adams and effected the defeat of Jackson. Adams, upon his succession, made Clay secretary of state. Thus he not only heaped upon himself charges of corruption but won the undying enmity of the rapidly growing Jacksonian forces. These troubles hampered him throughout his term and in 1828 he was overwhelmed. But instead of retiring the diligent Adams returned to the House of Representatives. Here he served conspicuously until paralysis struck him in his House seat Feb. 21, 1848. He died two days later. He is shown above on a stamp of the new U. S. regular series, enlarged.

Modern Menus

Q:—What for dessert?

A:—Quaker Chocolate Oatmeal Pudding.

And there you have a tasty solution to a ticklish problem because everybody will like this delicious new kind of pudding . . . father, brother, sister—and you, too, mother.

Because it's made with Quaker Oats it's just as good for your family's health as it is good to eat. Oatmeal you know is nature's richest economical source of Thiamin (Vitamin B1), which everybody, young and old, should have every day. Since Thiamin is not stored in the body nwe fresh supplies are continuously needed to nourish nerves and aid digestion. Oatmeal also is rich in muscle-building proteins and those valuable minerals, iron and phosphorus. So this Quaker Chocolate Oatmeal Pudding is really a health pudding as well as taste satisfying treat that's fine to top off any meal.

This Quaker Chocolate Oatmeal Pudding is a thrifty dessert, too, because Quaker Oats is very economical. If by chance there's cooked oatmeal left over from breakfast, use it. And this is one pudding that's just as easy to make as it is economical. Tear out the recipe now. Enjoy this unusual dessert tonight.

Quaker Chocolate Oatmeal Pudding
(Serves 6-8)

4 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup cocoa
½ cup sugar
2 cups Quaker oats
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Bring water to a boil and add salt. Add cocoa and sugar mixed to a paste with ½ cup of the boiling water. Slowly stir in the Quaker or Mother's Oats. Cook for 5 minutes, stirring just enough to prevent sticking. Add vanilla. Serve hot or cold, with cream.

ONE CAN SIP—OR SPOON—THIS SPARKLING PUNCH

WITH the addition of but two simple ingredients one can convert this tart, refreshing punch into a smooth, fluffy ice. Here's the recipe for

SPARKLING PUNCH
(Serves 6)

¾ cup grape juice
¼ cup lemon juice
1½ cups pineapple juice
1 pint gingerale

Combine fruit juices in jar and place in refrigerator to "ripen." Stored in the vitalized cold of a modern air-conditioned ice refrigerator, this mixture will remain fresh and full-flavored for at least a week. Just before serving, add gingerale and pour over ice cubes.

Incidentally, pure, sparkling ice cubes may be obtained direct from the ice service man, or with a new cuber gadget, one can make almost any number of cubes right on the cake of ice in the refrigerator.

When Sparkling Punch becomes Sparkling Ice, simply add to the same mixture of fruit juices, ¾ cup of corn syrup. Then add the gingerale and fold in 1 stiffly-beaten egg white. Pour in freezing container and freeze, using 3 parts crushed ice and 1 part rock salt. Frozen, this recipe will serve 10.

Blossom Out in This Frock When Leaves Start Falling

By CAROL DAY

Do you wear junior sizes? Then here's one of the first things you'll want for fall—a short-sleeved wool frock in the casual manner.

Make Pattern 8248 right now and have it ready to jump into, the very first day that crispness in the air makes you long for something fall-like.

The high neckline, tiny waist, plain skirt and Victorian sleeves—puffed at the shoulder and narrowing to the arm below—are all details that you'll see in expensive new models. You can be among the first to wear these details, by making this yourself, of fine quality fabric.

Heavy silk crepe, sheer wool and light-weight flannel are smart materials for this design. You'll like a later version of it, too, in velveteen.

Pattern 8248 is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19. With long sleeves, size 13 requires 3¾ yards of 39-inch material. With short sleeves, 3⅜ yards.

The new Fall and Winter Pattern Book, 32 pages of attractive designs for every size and every occasion, is now ready. Photographs show dresses made from these patterns being worn; a feature you will enjoy. Let the charming designs in this new book help you in your sewing. One pattern and the new Fall and Winter Pattern Book—25 cents. Pattern or book alone—15 cents.

For a Pattern of this attractive model send 15c in coin, your name, address, style number and size to Hope Star Today's Pattern Bureau, 211 W. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill.

World-Weary Airman Starts Island Utopia

SYDNEY, N.S.W.—(AP)—Fred Briggs, former member of the Royal Australian Air Force, is making plans to "get away from it all" and start a co-operative community called the international Goodwill Settlement on Nukahiva, an island in the Marquesas Group.

Hundreds of inquiries have been received from all over Australia, but only 80 were accepted. Each was able to pass a rigid medical test and is ready to contribute $400 to a community chest.

The island is 47 miles square and is said to be rich in vegetables and animal life. Its former native inhabitants are non-existant.

"Although Nukahiva would support us without our needing to do a stroke of work," he said, "we don't propose to be idle. We shall build houses, graze stock and perhaps do a little trading in island produce. And there is always fish to be found," Briggs says.

Terns Moving North

MIAMI, Fla.—(AP)—The Sooty and Noody Terns, two comparatively rare species, appear to be moving north. Southern Florida observers found hundreds of these birds, which ordinarily inhabit only the warm climates of South America.

"I'M TOUGH! I EAT QUAKER OATS EVERY DAY!"

WHY is it you so often find the sturdiest, healthiest youngsters and grownups have been "brought up" on Quaker Oats? Because oatmeal is the richest of all whole grain foods in strength-giving proteins. Proteins, you know, are the vital food elements best for building muscle, firm flesh, and lasting strength. It's richer than other thrifty cereals too in phosphorus for teeth and bones, in iron, and in important Vitamin B_1, the nerve-digestive-appetite vitamin which children and everybody need supplied to them every day! So serve delicious Quaker Oats often to help fill out your growing boy or girl with the sturdy "tough" kind of muscular flesh and improve your own general well-being. Quaker Oats saves money, too . . . often cuts breakfast costs to half of more expensive foods . . . and you can have it ready in only 2½ minutes! Get a package of Quaker Oats at your grocer's today!

Three Softball Games to Be Played Here Thursday Night

Basket and Penney Girls Team to Meet

Winner to Be Matched With Prescott or Ashdown Team

Three softball games will be played Thursday night at Fair Park, the faeture contest scheduled between the Hope Basket girls and the J. C. Penney girls beginning promptly at 7 o'clock.

This will be the deciding battle of a three-game series between the two teams, the Basket girls winning the first game and the Penney girls taking the second contest by a score of 14 to 13.

Softball Supervisor Earl W. Erion said the winning team Thursday night would be matched either with Ashdown or Prescott here Friday night. Erion said both teams were anxious to come to Hope.

The second game Thursday night will be between the Geo. W. Robison team and the Hope Travelers. The Robison team is in third place. The Travelers, who have lost six straight games, will attempt to break into the win column. The team has been strengthened, according to the manager of the Travelers.

The third contest Thursday night will be between the Bruner-Ivory team, holding second place, and the Alton CCC camp, a fourth place team.

Atlanta Takes Third Straight Game From Knoxville

NEW ORLEANS—(AP)—Russell "Red" Evans chalked up his seventeenth victory of the season Wednesday night at the expense of the Little Rock Travelers, who fell before the New Orleans Pelicans, 7 to 2.

Evans was nicked for nine hits but he kept them well scattered and never was in much danger after his mates supplied him with a two-run margin in the second inning.

An American Institution Passes

Many a wide-eyed tourist has been toted up Pike's Peak on the famous cog railroad, with tilted steam locomotives, like that in the lower photo, furnishing the power. But streamlining has caught up with the Rockies and the old engines have given way to three very modernistic, 50-passenger cars, like that in top picture. One of the old-time engines, which have been used for 50 years, will be placed atop Cheyenne Mountain, facing the Peak, as a monument.

Marie Wilson Fan Club Gets A New Member: George Ross

NEW YORK.—Our favorite movie star is a wonderful young lady named Marie Wilson. From what we hear, it seems she is everybody's favorite movie star nowadays. In Hollywood the recently we saw our dream girl in "Boy Meets Girl," which was being press-previewed, and we haven't changed our mind. She is superb.

We met Marie at the House of Murphy which is just about as fine a steak-house as the transient will find west of the Mississippi. She was sitting at a table across the room with a gentleman friend and a visiting fireweman who, we might as well tell you now, is the president of the Marie Wilson Fan Club of Columbus, Ohio, and editor of a quaint little quarterly called The Wisonette.

She told Bob Tapinger, the amiabe public relations man on the Warner lot, that she would be delighted to join us as soon as she had read the last Marie Wilson paper. So we waited with some anticipation, because we had heard that Marie is the girl who replied, when once asked why she was so fidgety, "I guess I must be allergic to nerves"—and with that, almost took the laurels away from Samuel Goldwyn.

Gets Big Fan Mail

Her fan mail is the second-largest in the Warner studios (Errol Flynn is first) and if we felt any sophisticated amusement at the idea of the president of the Marie Wilson Fan Club of Columbus, Ohio, dining out with her blonde goddess, Mr. Taplinger said to forget it. Because fans have made Marie what she is today, and we like her as she is.

Don't quote us, but they say that Marie came out here a couple of years ago with her folks and a wad of $15,000 that a deceased uncle had left to her. So the Wilsons took the money and invested it in the project of putting Marie-in-the-movies. They leased an expensive house in the star sector, sank a couple of grand in a wardrobe, another thousand in canned goods for a just-in-case emergency, bought a couple of cars, hired a couple of servants and waited on the studios to call.

No calls. No offers and the bankroll ran down. First the servants went. Then one of the cars vanished. The canned goods diminished. And Maries used to coast down the hill to save gas. Or so the unembellished tale goes. Then she got a $25 a day speaking part (two lines) and an assistant director noticed her and the rest of her brief but triumpant career goes on from there. Her fans are proud of her.

A Cherry Cutie-pie

Well, to get on about the other night—Marie approached our table and the stout little lady from Columbus, Ohio, glanced our way with some annoyance for having cut in on her territory.

Marie was dressed as we would have liked her to be. A cherry-red hat, garnished with a bouquet of ornamental berries. A bonnet ribbon under her chin. A formfitting dress and jacket. And her features are as the screen depict them. Roseate complexion. The longest natural lashes we've seen. Nice eyes. An honest and disarming smile. And the same baby voice that goes on the sound track.

Wasn't it sweet, she said, of the Marie Wilson Fan Club to send the president all that way to see her? She showed us a copy of the Wilsonette and it was just what we imagined.

Isn't that Marie Wilson Club cute? Look at that poem they wrote! They do it all themselves, too. Isn't Bette Davis wonderful? I'd surely like to be her. One of these days, as soon as she gets that radio contract that is pending, she is going to send for a little cripple Marie Wilson fan in the Middle West and set her up in Hollywood for a month or two. That radio job would just about clear that trip financially.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25 cents. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

"Seeing Eye" Dog Knows Her Customers

WAYNESVILLE, N. C.—(AP)—Roy Moseman, blind, 35-year-old newspaper route carrier, believes his "Seeing Eye" dog, Sallie, a Black Labrador, is the only dog in the country that knows every subscriber on a newspaper route.

Sally knows Moseman's subscribers even better than he does. If he happens to forget one on his daily rounds, the dog tugs at her harness and refuses to move on until the subscriber is served.

If Moseman misses his aim in tossing a paper into a subscriber's porch, Sally quickly corrects the error by picking up the paper and putting it where it should be.

Tea Versus Beer

MELBOURNE, Victoria.—(AP)—An enterprising caterer is trying to substitute tea for beer as the favorite beverage among football spectators here. He offers eight-ounce cartons at five cents apiece. The tea keeps keep hot for 15 minutes.

Fiery Itching Skin Gets Quick Relief

Simple Home Treatment Proves It At Small Cost

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to stop the itching and torture of Eczema, Itching Toes, or Foot Rashes and many other externally caused skin eruptions and that is to apply Moone's Emeral Oil night and morning and people who suffer from such embarrassing or unsightly skin troubles would be wise to try it.

Ask Ward & Son Drug Store or any first-class druggist for an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil and refuse to accept anything else. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that a small bottle lasts a long time and furthermore if this clean, powerful, penetrating oil that helps promote healing fails to give you full and complete satisfaction you can have your money refunded. Greasless and stainless.

I appreciate the loyal support and the large vote that the voters of Hempstead county gave me in nominating me as Representative.

I pledge that I shall represent all of you.

Mrs. Wisenberger joins me in thanking all the citizens of our county.
